FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

QUICKEN LOANS ARENA AND STEELYARD COMMONS EXPAND COMMUNICATIONS

CLEVELAND (March 2007) – Independence Communications Inc., a wireless systems integrator located in Cleveland, has completed a contract for new communications equipment for two of Cleveland's largest organizations – Quicken Loans Arena and the much anticipated Steelyard Commons.

“Working with both organizations has been a great experience,” said Don DiGeronimo, president of Independence Communications Inc. “This new equipment allows the staff of these two organizations to provide the people of Cleveland with a better experience.”

The Quicken Loans Arena purchased 600 portable Motorola HT 1250LS+ radios for use by the concession and fine dining operators. The radios allow the staff to easily and quickly communicate with each other and various different arena groups with a push of the button.

Steelyard Commons, Cleveland's largest open-air retail development, made the purchase of Motorola HT750 and EX500 portable radios for its facility management communications, as well as staff, security and engineering communications. The radios will be the main source of communications for all of Steelyard Commons.

Independence Communications was awarded both contracts in December of 2006 and completed in January of 2007.
